A native of Korea, Mr Chan was a graduate of the Kung-Hee University in Seoul, Korea and graduated with a BA degree in 2003. After graduating he took a job in a trading company and also traveled widely in the USA and England. He is presently studying at the London College of Fashion.

He designed a highly original bag to fit over the body of a person taking part in extreme sports to contain equipment and at the same time to protect the wearer's body. He called his entry Approaching Anatomical. Mr Chan says he has always been very keen on sport and had given a lot of thought to protecting the bodies of those who engaged in extreme sports. When he saw notices of the Design A Bag competition on the Internet he decided this was his opportunity.

"My ambition now is to become a designer for a company that makes sporting equipment and clothes", he said, "I am a keen sportsmen myself and I do understand the needs and the problems of athletic and active people.
